

A PLEXEDGE GUIDE FOR ONTARIO OWNERS

Your lot is worth more than the house on it.

The lot you already own could legally hold three, four, or five self-contained units — which can change what your property is worth, and who lines up to buy it. The rules changed. Most people haven't caught up.

— YOU MAY OWN MORE THAN A HOUSE

Most owners think they own a house. Since 2023, many are actually sitting on a lot the city now lets you turn into three, four, even five self-contained units — for extended family, for rental income, or to unlock the lot's real value when you sell. The zoning quietly changed, and the financing changed right after it.

— WHAT THE RULES NOW ALLOW

3ALMOST ANYWHERE

Up to 3 units on nearly any Ontario residential lot — no special approval needed.

4MANY CITIES

Vaughan, Hamilton, Kitchener-Waterloo & more allow four as-of-right.

5IN TORONTO

Four units in the house plus a garden or laneway suite in the yard.

— AND THE FINANCING CHANGED TOO

Here's what makes it real: since 2024, if you'll live in one unit, CMHC treats a home with up to 4 units as your home — as little as 5–10% down, and the tenants' rent helps you qualify. Owners building five or more units can reach CMHC's commercial program (longer amortization, higher leverage). Either way, the tenants help carry the mortgage.

— TWO WAYS THIS PAYS OFF

IF YOU'RE STAYING

Let the income carry the home.

Add a unit or two, rent them out, and let the income shrink — or erase — your monthly housing cost. Room for family, or steady rental income, on the lot you already own.

IF YOU'RE SELLING

A bigger number, a bigger buyer pool.

A lot that can legally hold 4–5 units is often worth more to the market than a single home. We also work with buyers actively looking for exactly these lots — so knowing your property's real potential can change your asking price, and your buyer pool, entirely.

The honest part

Not every lot qualifies. It depends on your city, your lot's width and depth, whether it backs onto a lane, and city permits. That's exactly what we check for you — free, and with no obligation. You'll know in one short conversation whether your home is a 3, 4, or 5-unit opportunity, and what it would take.

— FROM PLAN TO BUILT — ONE TEAM

We bring the strategy, the research, and the salesperson side — finding, valuing, and listing the right lot. Our construction partner (15+ years, 200+ units) handles permits, the build, and a real quote. Most agents don't know where to start; with PlexEdge, you get both ends.

No guaranteed cost, timeline, or quote — every project is confirmed individually at feasibility.

WHO YOU'RE WORKING WITH

Taran Aujla

Taran comes at real estate from two sides. He's managed multi-unit rentals since his teens — raised around Montreal's plexes — and for close to a decade he practised business and real estate law in Ontario, closing several hundred transactions. Now a licensed Salesperson, he works document-first: read the file, build the position, understand both sides of the table. He also keeps a private list of qualified buyers ready to move — which can mean selling your home without a long wait on the open market.

Educational information only — not legal, planning, mortgage, tax, financial, or investment advice. Whether a specific lot can hold three, four, or five units depends on the municipality's zoning, lot dimensions, lane access, permits and a site-specific review; mortgage eligibility, down payment and rental-income treatment are set by the lender and CMHC and confirmed by a CMHC-approved mortgage professional. Owner-occupied financing requires you to occupy one unit. Figures are illustrative and not a guarantee of financing, cost, income, or return.
